Forty-six patients are now being treated at the Pittsford sanatorium.

John P. Collins, for over 20 years a conductor on the Rutland trolley lines,

Charles M. Cox of Boston, head of the St. Albans Grain company, had a narrow escape from death Dec. 13 when he jumped from an elevator at the plant in St. Albans. The ligaments in both his legs and in his feet were strained. The elevator runs by means of an endless chain and had passed above the top floor before Mr. Cox noticed it. He then had to jump eight feet to prevent being crushed.

The woman's foreign missionary so ciety of the First Methodist church of Pittsfield, Mass., will name one of the buildings which the church is erecting at the university in Seoul, Korea, after Lloyd A. Hamilton, son of Rev. and Mrs. John A. Hamilton of Burlington, who was killed abroad in the war by a fall from an airplane. Rev. Dr. Hamliton was a former pastor of the Massachusetts church and the naming of the building after his son is a tribute to the interest of Dr. Hamilton in misionary work while he was with the Pittsfield church.
